I've been meaning to build a massive chase-logs page for all our storm chases back to 1998, complete with model forecasts, SPC products, watches and warnings, pictures, video, and radar images/loops. We'll be working on this gradually over the near future, and should have a very comprehensive chase-logs page up soon.

In addition, some of our other teams may be contributing content to the chase-logs page as well.

Be patient! We have many exciting things planned for the site.

It's easy to be patient - I'm just having the best time traveling around the site. The time and effort that's been put into this must have been substancial! You've thought of many things that could have been overlooked.
Even without realtime weather events this place is a kick!

Funny you say that . . . haha i think we are all geeks at heart!! :) Once you can get over the idea that everyone will be asking you if you'll be on tv and having them think your crazy for taking a car towards a 'terrible' storm . . . you'll begin to realize that it's awesome being a geek in this field!! :)

and Reed . . . this new site is pretty incredible!! I can't wait (well i'll have to). . . for the chase logs to be up! Especially the Manitoba wedge!!

well i am a meterology major at millersville university and two of the most challenging cources that i will face are physics and calculous. At my college meterology falls under earth science verses physics so i think that is the easier rout if youre not too great at math. Thats just what is working for me.

Well, I just visited the University of Oklahoma on Monday. It has a great meteorology program and the National Weather Service Headquarters is on the campus. If your interested in chasing, they showed me fleet of chase cars and the DOW vehicle that they are getting ready to deploy on a 5 week long chase.

I've also visited Mississippi State University which also has a solid program. They are growing quickly and are known for putting meteorologists on television.

HI EVERYONE, WE FOUND THE INTERACTIVE MAP THAT SHOWS THE LOCATION OF THE ACTIVE STORM CHASERS AND THIER LIVE VIDEO AND STILL SHOTS ECT THROUGH THE DISCOVERY CVHANNEL YESTERDAY. THEN SOMEHOW FOUND THIS AWESOME SITE. I LOVE THE FACT THAT I CAN SIT AND WATCH THE CHASERS AND THIER LOCATION AND WHAT THEY ARE CHASING LIVE AND THIS SITE IS ALSO AWESOME. WE ARE FROM WISCONSIN SO WE DO NOT GET MUCH ELSE THAN THUNDERSTORM WARNINGS HERE, EXCEPT A FEW YEARS AGO AN UNCONFIRMED TORNADO MADE A TREE FLY DOWN OUR STREET AND I GUESS IT TOOK ME BY SURPRISE. I WAS ON THE PHONE TALKING TO A SOLDIER IN IRAQ AND JUST TOLD HIM IT WAS RAINING AND THEN THE NEXT THING HE HEARD ME SAY WAS I WONDER WHOSE TREE THAT WAS THAT JUST FLEW BY. THEN HE DECIDED I SHOULD GET TO A SAFE PLACE. EVER SINCE THAT DAY MY HUSBAND, SON AND I HAVE BEEN TRYING TO PHOTOGRAPH
